

DEALER AUCTIONS IN THE UNITED STATES

Copyright 2011 © Jason Hedjazi. Please do not duplicate or distribute this. I happen to be a lawyer as well as a car dealer, so I take copyright infringement seriously!

This is just a mere snapshot of what is in my products. There is much more detail in my products if you were to purchase them. The only thing I ask is that you visit <http://www.dealerlicense.com> after you read the free guide, and browse through the very useful products we have to offer to make it easy to get your dealer license.

"It's not your State's job to make it easy for you to get a license... It's OUR job!"

Most dealer auctions in the United States are owned by a company called “Manheim”.

Their website is <http://www.manheim.com>

On their website, you can pull the list of current dealer auctions. I'm sure you will find one near you!

Manheim is also international and has auctions in China and other countries including U.S. Territories.

Another dealer auction chain is called “Adesa”. Adeasa is more popular on the east coast and Canada, but has a few locations on the west coast as well.

Their website is <http://www.adesa.com>

If you are into SALVAGE vehicles, I would try Copart or IAA.

Copart's website is <http://www.copart.com>

IAA's website is <http://www.iaai.com>

From my experience, the salvage business is tough and most dealers who do well either own an auto body repair shop, or export cars to other countries, where a salvage title is not an issue.

If you are just beginning in the car business, your best bet is going to a Manheim or Adesa auction.

There are numerous other independent dealer auctions, but they tend to be smaller than Manheim or Adesa auctions.

Are you into MOTORCYCLES? If so, you can visit National Powersports <http://www.npauctions.com>

They have locations in California, Texas, Georgia and Ohio.

Good luck and see you at the auctions!

(Just try not to bid against me if you recognize me). ☺
